

Luke Wallace

Luke Wallace is a dynamic force in the world of folk music, using his talent as a songwriter, speaker, and choral arranger to champion environmental causes and inspire positive change. Hailing from the Coast Salish Territory known as Vancouver, Canada, Luke has been on a decade-long journey of touring, recording and organizing for the betterment of people and the planet.

Luke's unique brand of politically charged folk has earned him a loyal following and a reputation as a modern-day Pete Seeger. From festivals to rallies to venues, Luke's music is a rallying cry for a movement of people rising up to meet the social and environmental challenges of our time. With his latest album, 'The Dandelion Resistance', Luke continues to push the boundaries of folk music and prove that art can be a powerful tool for change.

Horsell Sings!

Horsell Sings! (previously known as Horsell Community Choir) was formed in March 2013 in response to local demand for a choir that would be open and encouraging to everyone wanting to experience the joy of singing, regardless of previous experience.

Under the inspired musical direction of Anna Tabbush, the choir has delighted local audiences with their beautifully harmonised voices performing songs in a variety of genres and moods. The repertoire draws on contemporary and traditional songs from the British Isles and around the world, arranged by Anna for the choir in three and four-part harmony. The choir has also performed many of Anna's own compositions, including the well-known song "Harbour".
